Looking after someone

Information and support for carers in Scotland
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>ABOUT THIS GUIDE</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>A CARER’S GUIDE</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>GETTING HELP AND SUPPORT</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Where to start</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Adult carer support plans and young carer statements</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Assessment for the person you care for</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Coming out of hospital</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Managing someone’s affairs</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Taking a break</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Equipment and technology</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>YOUR FINANCES</td>
<td>23</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Getting information on benefits</td>
<td>24</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carer’s Allowance</td>
<td>25</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carer’s Allowance Supplement</td>
<td>26</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carer’s Credit</td>
<td>27</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Disability benefits for the person you are looking after</td>
<td>28</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Help with council tax</td>
<td>29</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other financial help</td>
<td>30</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>YOUR WORK</td>
<td>32</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Working carers</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Your rights in work</td>
<td>34</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Getting support</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>DIRECTORY</td>
<td>38</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
About this guide

Every year over 160,000 people in Scotland become carers, looking after family or friends who are older, disabled or seriously ill.

At times, caring can bring many positives and rewards. There’s nothing more natural and human than helping our loved ones get the most out of life.

There’s also nothing more difficult than focusing on someone else’s needs without neglecting our own. Whether we’re caring around the clock or balancing caring with work and family life, it can be exhausting.

The ‘system’ can be bewildering. The emotions can be shattering.

Carers Scotland is here to give you expert information and advice, to champion your rights and to support you in looking after your loved ones without putting your own life on hold.

This guide is designed to outline your rights as a carer and give an overview of the support available.

Whatever challenges caring brings you, Carers Scotland is in your corner.

This icon means there is a factsheet available which you can download from our website or order a printed copy by contacting the Carers UK Helpline on 0808 808 7777 (Monday & Tuesday) or at advice@carersuk.org.

However caring affects you, we’re here.
A carer’s guide

Looking after someone can be tough. Here are ten of the key challenges that caring can throw your way...

1. Getting the right advice and information... quickly!

Caring can be extremely complicated, whether we’re grappling with the benefits system or considering how to pay for care. Each strand is confusing but when all the strands are tangled, it can feel bewildering. Turning to an expert can help to unravel the most complex situation.

“I was on the verge of a breakdown, and my family life was almost in crisis. I contacted the Carers UK Helpline and you gave me vital information that empowered me to challenge and win my case with my council.”
2 Coping with feelings of guilt

When we’re looking after someone, it’s important to accept that guilt is normal and that we only feel it because we care. Being able to talk to people who understand what we’re going through and how we feel can help us handle our feelings of guilt better.

“After the diagnosis, I was consumed with the thought that I could have done more. Why didn’t I recognise the signs? I now accept that what has happened isn’t anyone’s fault. So now I don’t say I feel guilty, I say I feel sad – an easier emotion to cope with.”

3 Being assertive with professionals

Looking after someone will often involve dealing with several different professionals. When we feel a professional has not explained things clearly, does not see the whole picture or perhaps is not doing what they should do, it can be hard to speak up. However, that is exactly what we need to do. And this starts with valuing ourselves and our caring role.

“The doctors discussed his condition with me and agreed that we should implement a care plan to give dad a dignified and pain-free death. They asked if I wanted to talk to dad about it, and I did.”
4 Handling difficult conversations

Even a tricky conversation with professionals can be a breeze compared to having to deal with family and friends. We may have to ask a sibling to be more supportive, remind a friend that we still exist or talk gently to a parent who doesn’t accept that they can’t live independently any longer. This takes courage, bags of patience and tact. Talking it through with people outside the situation can make a world of difference.

“We put off talking about mental capacity with my grandmother. Having these difficult conversations early is far preferable to leaving it too late and having other people make decisions about the future.”

5 Looking after our own health and wellbeing

As carers, we may have immediate needs such as taking breaks, getting sleep, eating properly or exercising. We may have longer-term needs such as building fulfilling relationships, pursuing hobbies or developing careers. Caring always involves an element of putting our own needs aside. However it’s important that we look after ourselves too, so we can keep going as carers, and because we are individuals whose needs are just as valid as those of our loved ones.

“I never took a break – I look back now and wish I had been stronger to let others help care for mum. After years of hardly any sleep and no break, I seem to be constantly poorly and my immune system is at a low.”
6 Noticing when we’re too stressed

Stress can alert us to potential dangers and spur us on to achieve a goal. However, sometimes the balance tips too far and the pressure becomes so intense or persistent that we may feel unable to cope. As soon as we notice it getting too much, it’s helpful to talk about how we feel rather than hoping the stress will go away.

“Sometimes stress and tiredness take their toll. One night we had a fight about nothing. At the time I didn’t know what to do or where I could go for help. That’s how it feels when we’re under stress.”

7 Making difficult decisions

There will be points when we are faced with a particularly emotional or difficult decision. Sometimes it’s a decision we have planned for, or at least held at the back of our minds. Sometimes it’s completely unexpected and leaves us feeling out of control. Where we can, thinking about decisions in advance can help us keep a cool head when it comes to the crunch.

“It’s better to be prepared and to do some research about different options, even if you’re not sure what route you’ll go down. I couldn’t have selected the right care home whilst mum was in hospital, in the middle of that stressful time.”
8 Keeping relationships fulfilling

Caring for our loved ones can express the best of who we are, and can take a relationship to a profound new level. It can also push us to the brink through financial, emotional and practical strain. Illness can cast aside the best-laid plans and make relationships feel utterly different. What matters most is that there’s a way for us to talk honestly and find help when we need it.

“I was suddenly juggling hospital visits, a full-time job and trying not to scream. I remember feeling I had lost all control over my life: that stroke had happened not just to Peter, but to both of us.”

9 Adapting to changing circumstances

Whether we’re looking after someone who’s recovering or whose condition is deteriorating over time, caring inevitably involves adapting to circumstances. Sometimes it’s easy to focus on the practical details – the administration of care workers or move to the care home. Being able to stay attentive to our relationship with the person we’re caring for in the midst of all that change is far from easy.

“There were times when it seemed that dad was at death’s door. But a couple of days later he was sitting up in bed, bright as a button. That really made the emotions difficult, constantly living on the edge.”
Keeping a sense of humour

Nothing relieves stress and tension better than a good laugh.

Sometimes caring can feel a bit like starring in our own sitcom, and there’s no shortage of comedy material. Other times we may need a bit of help finding something to laugh about. Either way, sharing experiences with other carers is often great not just for feeling listened to and understood but for finding the humour that can keep us going.

“Dementia is no laughing matter, but humour is my way of coping. I treat most of dad’s outbursts as comedy gold for the book or the sitcom I’ll never get round to writing!”

Join Carers Scotland for support, understanding and lasting change

However caring affects you and your family, we’re here for you.

By joining Carers Scotland, which is part of Carers UK, you can be part of a supportive community and a movement for change.

You can join quickly and easily by: visiting carerscotland.org or calling us on 0141 445 3070

@carersscotland /carersscotland
Getting help and support
Where to start

Caring can be hard work – physically and emotionally. It’s important to find out about the different ways you can get help and support with caring.

One way to get help and support is through an assessment by the local authority. Both you and the person you care for can get an assessment. This may result in help and support being provided to you as a carer and/or to the person you are looking after. For further information see pages 13-14.

You could decide to buy in additional help and support for the person you are looking after. You could decide to employ an individual or use a care provider such as a care agency.

If you are looking for care providers you could:

• ask the local authority if they have a list of approved care providers
• search on the Care Inspectorate website: careinspectorate.com/index.php/care-services/

• search on the Which? Later Life Care directory: which.co.uk/later-life-care/care-services-directory

You can also find out about equipment and technology that could help make your home safer, your life easier and provide independence for the person you are looking after – see page 20.

Caring inevitably means adapting to changing circumstances, so it’s important to think about the future. You may need to look into different ways of managing someone’s affairs, either now or for the future – see page 16.

You could find out if you have a local carers organisation, and if so what support they offer to carers in the area. To find your local carers organisation visit carersuk.org/localsupport

Upfront is a free online tool that can help you get straight to the information you need. Visit carersuk.org/upfront to give it a go!
Pete’s story

Pete has been married to Jill for 54 years. Jill developed vascular dementia in 2006 and by 2008 Pete had given up his job as a painter and decorator to look after Jill full-time. A member of Carers UK since 2008, Pete has posted in the Forum over 9,000 times!

“...As a carer you get used to putting on a brave face. I certainly did, especially at the beginning. I didn’t know what had hit me – I suddenly found myself stuck indoors 24/7.

I couldn’t work anymore as a painter and decorator, the job I loved and had done for 50 years. Being at home all day drove me nuts. One day ‘Carers UK’ came into my mind out of the blue – I must have read about them somewhere.

That’s how I found the Carers UK online forum.

It took several months before I dared post, but once I took the plunge the response I got from other carers was amazing. It was such a relief to talk to people who cared about what I was going through and understood how I felt.

They did more to help me than they will ever know.”

Carersuk.org/forum

Access to the Carers UK online forum is one of the benefits of Carers UK membership.

The forum is somewhere you can chat online to other carers and talk to people in the same situation as you. There are lots of friendly and helpful people who are always willing to give help and advice to fellow carers.

To join Carers UK and become part of this online community go to carersuk.org/join
Adult carer support plans and young carer statements

If you are a carer who appears to have a need for support you should be offered an adult carer support plan by the local authority of the person you are looking after. If you are under 18 (or 18 if still at school) you should be offered a young carers statement by the local authority you live in.

If you are not offered a support plan/statement, you should contact the local authority and ask for one. You can have one of these no matter what your level of need, the amount of care you provide or your financial means. Your support plan/statement should cover:

• your caring role and how it affects your life and wellbeing
• your feelings and choices about caring
• your health
• work, study, training, leisure
• relationships, social activities and your goals
• housing
• planning for emergencies

Following this the local authority will decide if you are eligible for support. This can be provided either to you, or to the person you are looking after to reduce the impact of caring on you. Support could be provided by the local authority, by a voluntary or independent organisation, or in the form of a direct payment.

Some examples of the kind of support you could get include; driving lessons, taxi fares, a laptop, help with housework or gardening or a gym membership.

The local authority cannot charge you for any support you receive that has been identified within your support plan/statement. This includes replacement care for the person you care for to help you have a break from caring.

Even if you are not considered to be eligible for support the local authority must provide you with information and advice on local services to prevent your needs from developing further. They may also offer training to help you care safely or emotional support.

Find out more at carersuk.org/scotland/support-plans
Assessment for the person you care for

If the person you are looking after is an adult and appears to have a need for support they should be offered a needs assessment by their local authority.

The person you are looking after can have an assessment no matter what their level of need or their financial means. If they are not offered a needs assessment, they (or you) should contact the local authority and ask for one.

The assessment will look at their physical, mental and emotional needs. You as a carer are entitled to be involved in the assessment.

Following the assessment, the local authority will decide whether the person you are looking after is eligible for support. Support could be provided by the local authority, a voluntary or independent organisation, or in the form of a direct payment.

Some examples of the kind of support the person you are looking after could get include; changes to their home to make it more suitable, a care worker to help with personal care, a place at a day centre or a temporary stay in residential care.

The local authority may charge for some of the support the person you care for needs, depending on their financial circumstances. Each local authority has their own charging policy, you should be provided with a copy and it should be explained.

Even if the person you are looking after is not considered to be eligible for support, the local authority must still provide them with information and advice.

Find out more at carersuk.org/needs-assessment

Note: Needs assessments are for adults (18+).
If you are looking after a child under 18 who is affected by disability they can have a Children Act assessment from the local authority. A Children Act assessment will consider all the help that your child needs, the needs of any other children in the family and the help that you may need to care for the child. Visit carersuk.org/assessments-under-18 for more detailed guidance.
Coming out of hospital

Deciding to care, or continue caring, for someone who is coming out of hospital can be very difficult.

It is important to remember that it is your choice whether or not to take on a caring role.

Before the person you are looking after comes home from hospital a discharge assessment should be carried out to see whether they need any support once they are discharged. The NHS has a duty to inform and involve you in discharge planning. This discharge assessment should look at whether the person you are looking after is eligible for: any intermediate or reablement care or NHS-funded nursing care, other NHS services and/or community care services from the local authority.

You should also be offered an adult carer support plan or young carers statement to see whether you as a carer need support once the person you are looking after is discharged.

If you are not offered this, you should contact the local authority of the person you are looking after and ask for one.

Find out more at carersuk.org/hospital
Managing someone’s affairs

You may want to help manage the affairs of the person you are looking after, or may want to know how to plan for doing this in the future.

There are different ways of managing someone’s affairs depending on whether the person you are looking after can currently make decisions for themselves (which is called having mental capacity) or whether they are unable to make decisions for themselves (which is called lacking mental capacity).

If the person you are looking after has mental capacity but wants some help with managing their bank or building society account, they could make a third party mandate. This gives a specific person, such as you as their carer, authority to manage their account.

If the person you are looking after can make decisions for themselves at the moment but wants to appoint a specific person, such as you as their carer, to make certain decisions on their behalf, should the need arise in the future, they could give a power of attorney while they are still able to do so.

Here are two types:

Power of attorney for property and financial affairs – bank accounts, paying bills, collecting benefits/pensions and selling a home for example. It can be used before the person is unable to make their own decisions, if they so wish.

Power of attorney for welfare – decisions about your health and welfare including living arrangements, medical treatment and personal care.

If the person you care for lacks capacity and does not have a power of attorney, you can apply for Guardianship (bold) to help with decisions about welfare and/or financial matters.

Find out more at carersuk.org/managing-someones-affairs
Taking a break

Caring for someone can be a full-time job so breaks are vital to your own wellbeing and quality of life.

There are different ways in which you may take a break as a carer. Only you will know what type of break is best for you. You may need an hour each week, a day here and there, a week or two for a holiday, or a combination of all of these.

Think about the kind of break that you need as a carer and what kind of alternative care the person you are looking after needs.

There are different options for getting alternative care (often called respite care) for the person you are looking after whilst you take a break:

• getting help from the local authority social work department via assessments (see pages 13–14)

• arranging care yourself (see page 11)

• support from friends or family

• some organisations provide break services for carers or for the person being looked after (or both).

If you want to go on holiday, either alone or with the person you are looking after, there may be some help you could get towards the cost. You could see if there are any local grants or schemes to help carers with the cost of a holiday and you could have a look through the list of organisations in our taking a break factsheet.

“Catch up on sleep and give yourself time to think. When you’re caring there are often complex emotions to deal with and feelings of loss. There is no right way to use your time, just be gentle on yourself.”

“It took years before I was able to consider respite for my daughter. Eventually after a difficult episode I gave in and accepted. Years on I now know I need that complete break each year. I come back recharged and more able to cope.”

Find out more at carersuk.org/break
Linda’s story

Linda cares for her husband, Charles, who has dementia and diabetes. Linda’s local carers’ service runs a sitting service, when volunteers will go and sit with Charles for a few hours so that Linda can do something for herself.

“It is true that you do find yourself slightly isolated as a carer. I have friends, but often Charles’ day-to-day needs transcend my own, so I can be an unreliable friend. As his carer I do a whole host of things to help him throughout the day – from making sure he takes his medication and doing his dinner to getting him to his different hospital appointments. The carers’ service has created the sitting service, when a volunteer will come in to sit with Charles for an hour or so at a time. They don’t do any caring activities, but keep him company and put my mind at ease that there’s someone there making sure nothing is going wrong. The service helps me pop out every now and again, even if it’s just to go to the doctors myself or for a haircut.

Like many other patients my husband doesn’t really like respite. Luckily, over the years we’ve had a friend that manages to come and look after him if I’m away for longer periods. That really works for us as I can take a break knowing that Charles is getting the care he needs, the way he likes it. That said, it’s not the long breaks that I look forward to, my main break is my garden, it’s the perfect escape. I’m within shouting distance if Charles is inside the house and I can have my mobile phone on me while I’m pottering around should there be an emergency. When the weather gets nice Charles can come outside and talk to me as I garden. I’m always there, still caring, but I’m away and taking some time for myself at the same time.”

If you need information about taking a break, download our factsheet at carersuk.org/break or contact the Carers UK Helpline on 0808 808 7777 (Monday and Tuesday) or email us at advice@carersuk.org
Michael’s story

Michael has dedicated the last 22 years of his life to caring for Margaret since her first stroke. They have been married for 50 years and have five children, 14 grandchildren and five great grandchildren.

Margaret suffered her first stroke at just 48 years of age. A year after this, she had a second, more severe, stroke which together with other complications led to problems with speech and swallowing.

Michael was told to prepare for the worst as the scans suggested that she had about six weeks to live.

“I made up my mind there and then that I would dedicate myself to Margaret for the rest of the time she had,” Michael explains. The fact that 20 years later, she’s still living a full life is testament to the family’s devotion and care.

The second stroke meant she was nil-by-mouth. After initially receiving a nasogastric tube, Margaret had a percutaneous endoscopic gastrostomy (PEG) tube fitted before she left hospital.

Over the years, Michael has become an expert on gastrostomy feeding. He advises people in a similar position to “learn as much as you can”. Michael says. “We are also in constant contact with the NHS Dietitians and the nutrition nurse specialists. I’m so grateful for all the advice and support we’ve had over the years.

“Despite everything that has happened, Margaret hasn’t lost her sense of humour. We still laugh. We still have fun. Being Margaret’s carer has left me stronger and more determined. As a carer, you need to be strong. Show them you are strong and they get stronger.”

As a carer, you need to be strong. Show them you are strong and they get stronger.

Michael and Margaret rely on the Nutricia Homeward Service to deliver the feed and supplies. Carers UK is working in partnership with Nutricia to help improve understanding about nutrition and care.

Nutricia specialises in the delivery of advanced medical nutrition for the very young, the old and the sick. They supply high quality feeds, systems and support services to patients and healthcare professionals.

Looking after someone carerscotland.org
Equipment and technology

Different types of equipment, adaptations and technology could help make your home safer, your life easier and provide independence for the person you are looking after.

Equipment could be purchased privately or you might be able to get help with the cost through the NHS or through assessments from the local authority, if they consider that the person you are looking after needs such equipment.

Minor adaptations (which means adaptations up to the value of £1,500) should be provided free of charge through assessments from the local authority, if they consider that the person you are looking after needs such adaptations. Adaptations that cost more than £1,500 could be paid for privately, or you could see if the person you are looking after can apply for a charitable grant to help meet the costs. You may also be able to get help from the local authority.

Assistive technology can help people live independently in their own homes and give you, the carer, peace of mind.

Unobtrusive monitoring devices such as sensors can be positioned throughout the home. They can detect if there is a problem, such as a gas leak or fire and the person you look after needs assistance.

Wearable technology can detect falls and locate a person if they have wandered.

There are also ways of using technology to monitor a person’s health remotely through equipment they have in their home. Conditions such as asthma, heart failure, diabetes, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), stroke and hypertension can be monitored.

Everday technology such as the internet or your mobile phone can take the stress out of a whole host of tasks such as shopping and coordinating care for the person you look after and can help them manage their own condition.

Find out more at carersuk.org/tech
Olga’s story

“...When I first heard about Carers UK’s Jointly app, I was juggling full-time work with caring for my parents. I was living 170 miles away from their home. It was a complicated and stressful situation. My mum has a range of conditions, including osteoporosis and arthritis. My dad had been caring for her, until 2015 when he was diagnosed with lymphoma and needed care himself.

My siblings and I tried to coordinate it between us, taking turns to travel to their home to help around the house, cook meals and take them to appointments.

Jointly was an excellent way of making sure we had all the information we needed in one place. We only had to enter the information once and all of us had access to it. Up until then we’d been trying to coordinate everything through email, phone calls and trying to share calendars. Each time one of us took mum or dad to an appointment we would make notes in Jointly. The medication list meant we all had up-to-date information to share with the GP – which was essential when dad was prescribed aspirin, which he wasn’t allowed to have whilst on his cancer drugs.

Being able to look after my parents has been really important to me. I wanted to return the care and love they gave me during my childhood. After dad passed away in 2016, my siblings and I have continued to share the care for mum, and Jointly helps us do that.”
Looking after someone?
Our jointly app can make your life easier

Looking after someone can be complicated. Jointly helps me stay on top of things and share information easily with everyone involved in sharing the care.

Jointly makes caring less stressful and a lot more organised.

Jointly is a mobile and online app designed to keep people connected as they share care.

It includes:
- Group messaging
- Task management
- Shared calendar
- Profile and contacts pages
- Medication manager.

Caring is easier when you do it jointly

jointlyapp.com
Developed by Carers UK

GET IT ON Google play
Available on the App Store

CarersUK
making life better for carers
Getting information on benefits

The benefits system is complicated, especially with the introduction of a benefit called Universal Credit, which is gradually replacing certain means-tested benefits and tax credits.

It is therefore a good idea to get a benefits check to make sure you and the person you are looking after are claiming all the benefits you are entitled to. In addition, it is a good idea to get benefits advice if you or the person you are looking after have a change of circumstances which might affect your benefits, to make sure you make the right decision for your situation.

Although benefits can be complicated, they can increase your household income and can sometimes help protect your State Pension entitlement in the future.

The Carers UK website describes the main conditions for each benefit and we have produced factsheets which provide more detailed explanations. Carers Scotland has specific information on Scotland only benefits. Find out more at carersuk.org/benefits

The Carers UK Helpline can help with questions that you have about benefits – email advice@carersuk.org or call 0808 808 7777.

You can get a personalised benefits check online. It will take about 20 minutes to complete. Visit turn2us.org.uk/find-benefits-grants

These online benefits check tools are not suitable for everyone. Special rules apply to some groups of people, for example: students, people under 18, people in permanent residential care, UK nationals who live abroad and people who are not British or Irish citizens.

You may be able to get face-to-face benefits help from a local advice centre such as your local Citizens Advice Bureau, Age Scotland, carers organisation or disability charity.
Carer’s Allowance

If you’re looking after a family member or friend, you may be entitled to Carer’s Allowance.

You may be eligible for Carer’s Allowance if you meet all of the following conditions:

- you look after someone who gets a qualifying disability benefit – this includes the middle or the higher rate of the care component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA), either rate of the daily living component of Personal Independence Payment (PIP), either rate of Attendance Allowance, Constant Attendance Allowance (at a certain level) and Armed Forces Independence Payment (AFIP)
- you look after that person for at least 35 hours a week
- you are aged 16 or over
- you are not in full-time education
- you don’t earn over £120 a week (after deductions)
- you satisfy UK presence and residence conditions.

If you are getting certain other benefits, including a State Pension, then you might not be able to be paid Carer’s Allowance at the same time.

However, it might still be useful to make a claim and receive what is called the ‘underlying entitlement’ to Carer’s Allowance, even though you won’t be paid the benefit itself. This is because this ‘underlying entitlement’ to Carer’s Allowance can help to increase any means-tested benefits you might be getting (such as Pension Credit, Housing Benefit and Council Tax Reduction), or it could mean that you become entitled to means-tested benefits for the first time.

Claiming Carer’s Allowance can sometimes have an impact on other benefits you receive, but this shouldn’t put you off thinking about making a claim, as it can often increase your household income overall.

Claiming Carer’s Allowance never reduces the amount of Disability Living Allowance (DLA), Personal Independence Payment (PIP), Attendance Allowance or State Pension that the person you are looking after gets. However it can sometimes affect any means-tested benefits they get.

Find out more at carersuk.org/carersallowance
Carer’s Allowance Supplement

The Carer’s Allowance Supplement was introduced to meet the Scottish Government’s commitment to increase Carer’s Allowance to the level of Jobseekers Allowance. Carer’s Allowance Supplement is only payable to carers who live in Scotland. The person you care for does not need to live in Scotland. It is paid as a lump sum twice a year to people in receipt of Carer’s Allowance on the qualifying dates. Carer’s Allowance Supplement payments will be £221 in 2018/19. Each payment covers six months. In 2018/19, the first qualifying date was 16 April 2018 and the second qualifying date was 15 October. Carer’s Allowance Supplement payments will continue to be paid every 6 months as long as you continue to qualify for Carers Allowance. They will be uprated annually.

It is not paid to carers who do not receive Carer’s Allowance but instead have an “underlying entitlement”. An underlying entitlement is where you are not being paid Carer’s Allowance because another benefit is paid at a higher rate. This applies to, for example, the state pension and Employment and Support Allowance.

Carer’s Allowance Supplement is not paid by the DWP. It is paid separately by Social Security Scotland. You do not need to do anything. As long as you are in receipt of Carer’s Allowance on a qualifying date, you will receive the payment automatically. If you receive a payment for a six month period but your caring role ends before the six months are over, you do not need to repay this payment.

Impact on other benefits

Carer’s Allowance Supplement does not affect other benefits such as housing benefit, income support, universal credit or council tax reduction. You do not need to tell anyone about this payment for benefit purposes and it will not affect the amount of any other benefit you receive.

Carer’s Allowance Supplement is not counted as income in calculating tax credits but Carer’s Allowance itself continues to be counted as income.

Carer’s Allowance Supplement is also not taken into account in income assessments for college student support. However, both Carers Allowance and the Carers Allowance Supplement are taxable, so you should let HM Revenue and Customs know about your Carer’s Allowance Supplement as this may increase the amount of tax you need to pay.

Find out more: carersuk.org/scotland/help-and-advice/social-security/carer-s-allowance
Carer’s Credit

Carer’s Credit is a way of protecting your State Pension rights if you are looking after someone but are not paying National Insurance contributions through paid work and are unable to claim Carer’s Allowance.

You do not get paid any money if you claim Carer’s Credit, but you get a National Insurance contribution credit to help protect your record (which helps to protect your entitlement to a State Pension).

If you already get Carer’s Allowance then you do not need to claim Carer’s Credit as your record is already protected.

To claim Carer’s Credit you need to be looking after someone for a total of 20 hours or more a week. The person you are looking after must normally be getting one of the following:

- the middle or the higher rate of the care component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA)
- either rate of the daily living component of Personal Independence Payment (PIP)
- either rate of Attendance Allowance
- Constant Attendance Allowance
- Armed Forces Independence Payment (AFIP).

However, if the person you are looking after doesn’t get one of these benefits, you may still be able to get Carer’s Credit. When you apply, fill in the Care Certificate part of the application form and get a health or social care professional to sign it.

Carer’s Credit can also help with breaks in your caring role. You can claim Carer’s Credit for any week within 12 weeks before the date you become entitled to Carer’s Allowance or following the week you stop being entitled to Carer’s Allowance. This is without meeting the 20-hour condition. This means you could have a break in caring for up to 12 weeks without losing your National Insurance contribution credit.

Find out more at carersuk.org/carerscredit
Disability benefits for the person you are looking after

The person you are looking after may be entitled to disability benefits to help pay for the extra costs of long-term illness or disability.

Disability benefits are not dependent on how much money the person you are looking after has, and they are not based on their National Insurance record. However, there are conditions they would have to meet in order to receive one of these.

Disability Living Allowance (DLA)
If you are looking after a child under 16 then you could claim DLA for them. DLA has a care component which may be awarded if the child needs help with personal care (such as dressing, washing or using the toilet) or supervision to make sure they are safe, because of their illness or disability. The help the child needs must be substantially more than the help needed by a child of the same age without the illness or disability. DLA also has a mobility component which may be awarded if the child needs help getting around.

Find out more at carersuk.org/dla

Personal Independence Payment (PIP)
If you are looking after someone aged between 16 and 64 then they could claim PIP. PIP has a daily living component which may be awarded if they need help with daily living activities, such as dressing, washing or using the toilet. PIP also has a mobility component which may be awarded if they need help getting around.

Find out more at carersuk.org/pip

Attendance Allowance
If you are looking after someone aged 65 or over then they could claim Attendance Allowance. Attendance Allowance may be awarded if they need help with personal care (such as dressing, washing or using the toilet), or supervision to make sure they are safe.

Find out more at carersuk.org/attendanceallowance
Help with council tax

If you’re caring for someone you may be able to get help with your council tax bill.

Council Tax Reduction is a scheme run by local authorities to help those on a low income with their council tax bill.

There are a number of circumstances in which properties can be exempt from council tax. These are the ones that may be particularly relevant to you as a carer:

• if you have left the property empty and it is no longer your main residence because you are providing personal care to someone
• if the only person(s) living in the property are severely mentally impaired and no one else could be liable to pay the council tax
• if the property has been left empty by someone who is now resident in a hospital, a care home or a hostel where personal care is provided.

There are sometimes discounts you can get on the council tax bill. If only one person lives in the property a 25% discount can be applied to the bill. Certain people, including some carers and people with a severe mental impairment, are not counted when the council works out how many people live in a property.

You may be able to pay less council tax under the disability reduction scheme if your home has had work carried out on it to help you or someone else living with a disability.

Find out more at carersuk.org/counciltax
Other financial help

There are other ways you may be able to get help with your household finances – such as help with fuel costs, help with health costs, or by applying for certain loans or grants.

Help with fuel costs
There are a number of ways you can get help with fuel costs:

- you could contact your supplier to see if they have any discounted tariffs you are eligible for. You may also want to shop around to see if you can find a better deal from another supplier, by using a price comparison website
- if you have reached the qualifying age you may be entitled to a Winter Fuel Payment to help pay winter bills – this can be between £100 to £300 depending on your circumstances
- if you’re receiving certain benefits you may be able to get a Cold Weather Payment of £25 for each week between 1 November and 31 March in which the average temperature in your local area is at or below freezing over seven consecutive days
- if you meet certain conditions you could get a Warm Home Discount on your electricity bill – this can be around £140.

Find out more at carersuk.org/fuel

Help with NHS health costs
In Scotland, everyone can get free prescriptions, NHS dental check ups and NHS eye tests regardless of your income.

If you are getting certain benefits you may qualify for help with NHS health costs. This includes dental treatment and vouchers to help pay for glasses/contact lenses, as well as reimbursement of fares to hospital for treatment for you or your child. You can also claim for the fares of a companion who needs to travel with you for medical reasons.

If you aren’t getting benefits which entitle you to help with NHS health costs, but you have a low income, you may be able to get help with health costs through the NHS Low Income Scheme.

Find out more at carersuk.org/healthcosts
Budgeting Loan

If you are getting certain benefits you may be able to get a Budgeting Loan to help pay for essential things like rent, furniture, clothes or hire purchase debts.

The smallest amount you can borrow is £100. Budgeting Loans are interest-free so you only pay back what you borrow. You normally have to repay the loan within 104 weeks.

Find out more at gov.uk/budgeting-help-benefits

Help from your local authority

Every local authority has a Scottish Welfare Fund. These help people on a low-income who are in crisis because of a disaster (such as a fire or a flood) or an emergency (such as where money has been lost or an unexpected expense has arisen). They also aim to help vulnerable people set up home or continue to live independently within their community.

For more information, contact your local council.

Grants

There are sometimes grants that you may be able to apply for. You can ask a local advice centre if there are any local grants. Turn2us is a charity which has a grants search tool. Find out more at turn2us.org.uk

Quotes from the Carers UK Helpline:

“Thank you so much for taking the time to do some research for me. I have calmed down somewhat now and can look at things more objectively having read your reply.”

“I can’t thank you enough. I so appreciate all the clarification and support you are giving us, I really do. I’ve been beyond my wit’s end, and your advice has eased a great deal of our concerns and fears.”
Your work
Working carers

If you are juggling work with caring for family or friends, you are not alone – there are more than 270,000 working carers in Scotland.

There are rights you have in work which might help you to juggle work and care (see pages 34–35). As well as these statutory rights, you may also have additional contractual rights.

In addition to your rights at work, there might be other ways to make juggling work and care easier, such as accessing relevant support at work (see page 36), or outside of your employment.

It is important to consider the full implications leaving work or reducing your hours could have on your income, quality of life and future pension entitlements.

Running through a benefits check will help you understand what your financial situation would look like if you were to leave your current work, reduce your hours or reduce your salary (see page 24).

Find out more at carersuk.org/work
Your rights in work

Without the right support, the stress and pressure of juggling work and care could lead people to leave their jobs. It’s important, therefore, to find out about your rights and about any support that is available.

Your rights at work come from two sources:
• the law gives you ‘statutory rights’ which everyone has
• your contract of employment gives you ‘contractual rights’, which can be more generous than statutory rights.

The following information is about statutory rights. However it is always worth checking your contract of employment, staff handbook or letter of appointment to see if you have any contractual rights on top of your statutory rights.

All employees have a right to request flexible working after they have worked for the same employer for 26 weeks (six months), as long as they haven’t already made a flexible working request within the last 12 months. Employers can only refuse requests for certain specified reasons.

Examples of flexible working include:
• home working
• part-time working
• term-time working
• flexitime
• working compressed hours
• job sharing
• shift work.

The Equality Act 2010 provides carers with protection from some forms of discrimination. For example, employers and providers of goods and services must not treat carers less favourably than those without caring responsibilities.

All employees have the right to take a ‘reasonable’ amount of time off work to deal with an emergency or an unforeseen matter involving a dependent (which includes your partner, child or parent, or someone living with you as part of your family – others who rely on you for help in an emergency may also qualify).

The time off is unpaid unless your employer is willing to give paid time off as a contractual right.
Looking after someone

Examples of emergency situations:
- a disruption or breakdown in care arrangements
- the death of a dependant
- if a dependant falls ill, has been assaulted or is in an accident
- to make longer term arrangements for a dependant who is ill or injured (but not to provide long term care yourself)
- to deal with an incident involving a child during school hours.

If you have worked for the same employer for 12 months and you are responsible for a child aged under 18, you are entitled to 18 weeks parental leave per child, which must be taken by the child’s 18th birthday.

This time off is unpaid unless your employer is willing to give paid time off as a contractual right.

Visit carersuk.org/work to read our online information.

“I care for my daughter and work part time. It’s the only break I get from my caring role. It’s a struggle to organise, especially in school holidays, but I enjoy getting out of the house and talking to the customers.”

“I applied to reduce my working hours from five to four days a week, on flexible working grounds. It’s hard work, but does mean I can fit in appointments and care meetings on my day off.”

“I care for my wife, who has MS and epilepsy. We have paid care workers coming in to help, which means I am able to work full time. However, when my wife has a bad episode the whole routine falls down. My employer supports me with a great deal of flexibility. When an emergency does happen, it is ‘don’t worry about work’. However, I quickly use up my annual leave because of caring, and unpaid leave isn’t an option.”
Getting support

Telling your employer that you are a carer is not always an easy step.

Ask your employer if they have a carers policy or other support that could help you as a carer, such as special leave.

Some organisations provide support such as counselling services and information for carers such as advice packs. Trade unions can also be a good source of support. You may find that your colleagues are supportive, or even in similar caring situations themselves.

As well as seeing if there is any support available to carers through your employment, you could explore the support available outside of your employment.

This could include getting an assessment to see if there is any support the local authority can offer to help you juggle work and care – see page 13.

This could also include speaking to others who know what you are going through.

Visit carersuk.org/localsupport to find carers organisations and support services available for carers in your local area.

Our online forum may be a good place to speak to other carers about how you are feeling – visit carersuk.org/forum.

Carers Scotland operates an awards scheme on behalf of the Scottish Government which raises awareness and recognises employers who support carers to balance the demands of work and caring.

Find out more at carerpositive.org
Scott’s story

Working carer Scott Corley’s daughter Amber has cystic fibrosis. He shares his experience of the importance of having an employer who is supportive of carers.

“When Amber was born I saw myself as a father, but after her cystic fibrosis diagnosis a thought jumped into my head, ‘I’ll have to give up work.’ That thought petrified me and that was when I realised I was a carer as well as a father. Now Amber’s 10 years old and my wife, Louise, and I care for her together.

I work as a service improvement partner for the Financial Ombudsman Service. My wife also works part-time for the same organisation.

It’s a balancing act. At work we try to help our managers understand our situation when we think Amber’s health is deteriorating. If I say to my manager, ‘Amber has a cough’ they need to understand that’s not just a normal cough and might be the start of something more serious, which might involve me being away from the office.

My employers are really supportive of us. We have a dedicated carers’ group in the office and I am now its co-chair. The visibility of carers in our organisation has helped other colleagues better understand the role of carers.

Being transparent about my situation with my employers has worked for me, but I know not all employers are as receptive. The support my organisation has given me as a carer makes me more committed to them.

There have been some dark moments with Amber and just knowing that I can take a paid day’s leave to be with her makes all the difference. It feels like a bit of good luck in a sea of bad luck.”

The visibility of carers in our organisation has helped other colleagues better understand the role of carers.

Looking after someone

carerscotland.org
Directory

There are a range of national organisations that can provide help. We’ve listed some of these below.

There are also many support groups and organisations locally that can provide help. Visit carersuk.org/localsupport to see what is available where you live.

Alzheimer’s Scotland
Information and advice for people with dementia and their carers.
T 0808 808 3000
alzscot.org

Age Scotland
Information and advice for the over 60s, and help to connect you with your community.
T 0800 12 44 222
ageuk.org.uk/scotland

Care Information Scotland
This is a phone, webchat and website service providing information about care services for people living in Scotland.
T 0800 011 3200
careinfoscotland.co.uk

Carers Trust Scotland
Information about local carer and young carer support services.
T 0300 772 7701
carers.org/scotland

Citizens Advice
Local offices for advice/representation on benefits, debt and housing.
citizensadvice.org.uk

Contact
Information and advice for families who care for children with a disability or special need.
T 0808 808 3555
contact.org.uk

Disabled Living Foundation
Information and advice on equipment for independent living.
T 0300 999 0004
dlf.org.uk

Enable
A membership organisation in Scotland for people with learning disabilities and family carers.
T 0300 0200 101
enable.org.uk
Carers UK Helpline

Caring can present all kinds of challenges, from filling in forms to coping with emotions. We’re here for you with advice, information and support every step of the way.

T 0808 808 7777 (Monday and Tuesday, 10am to 4pm)
E advice@carersuk.org
Open Monday to Friday, 10am to 4pm.

Independent Age
Information and advice for older people, their families and carers.
T 0800 319 6789
independentage.org.uk

Macmillan Cancer Support
Information and advice for people with cancer, their families and carers.
T 0808 808 00 00
macmillan.org.uk

Marie Curie
Support for people living with any terminal illness, and their families.
T 0800 090 2309
mariecurie.org.uk

Shared Care Scotland
Information about taking a break from caring.
T 0138 362 2462
sharedcarescotland.com

Support in Mind Scotland
Information and advice for people affected by mental illness and their carers.
T 0131 662 4359
supportinmindscotland.org.uk

Relationships Scotland
Counselling and support services for couple, families and young people.
T 0345 119 2020
relationships-scotland.org.uk

Shelter Scotland
Information and advice on housing issues.
T 0808 800 4444
scotland.shelter.org.uk
Every year over 160,000 people in Scotland become carers, looking after family or friends who are older, disabled or seriously ill.

However caring affects you, we’re here.

For expert information and advice about caring, contact the Carers UK Helpline:

T 0808 808 7777 – Monday and Tuesday, 10am to 4pm
E advice@carersuk.org

This guide was proudly supported by

Carers Scotland The Cottage, 21 Pearce Street, Glasgow G51 3UT
T 0141 445 3070  |  E info@carerscotland.org  |   carerscotland.org

Give us your feedback on this Guide by emailing your comments to info@carersuk.org

This guide is designed to provide helpful information and advice. While we work to ensure that our information is accurate and up to date, we would recommend contacting the Carers UK Helpline or visiting our website for more information.

Carers Scotland is a part of Carers UK, a charity registered in England and Wales (246329) and in Scotland (SC039307) and a company limited by guarantee registered in England and Wales (864097). Registered office 20 Great Dover Street, London SE1 4LX.